Monday/Wednesday/Friday 11:30-12:20 3 Credits, Open Enrollment

CRN: 83261

Location: Hodges Hall Rm 340

Professor: Morgan Roediger

How do we write a story that captivates an audience?

Can we capture the essence of place? Character?

What can we do to capture our voice and vision in writing?

Course Description: In English 212, we will be reading a mix of contemporary short stories, flash fiction, and, of course, your writing. We will be discussing the qualities that make a piece of fiction work and then try to implement those qualities in your own work. You will be writing, revising, and writing more in this class, and in the end produce work that you're proud to call your own.
